Frye, Schwarzenegger campaign together for Prop. 11

Councilmember Frye joined Governor Schwarzenegger and numerous local leaders in San Diego Oct. 20 to urge all Californians to support Prop. 11 on Election Day, Nov. 4.

"Prop. 11 will finally rid California of a conflict of interest that has plagued our state government for years and has led to gridlock in Sacramento which, in turn, negatively impacts our local communities," Frye said. "

Prop. 11 will create a 14-person, independent citizens commission to draw fair legislative districts — keeping communities, cities and counties intact. The commission will be comprised of five Democrats, five Republicans and four individuals from other parties. Under Proposition 11, the redistricting process will be open and transparent with opportunity for public input.

"Proposition 11 is one of the most important reforms there is because it will take the power to draw legislative boundaries away from the Legislature and give it back to the people," said Gov. Schwarzenegger. "The last time legislators drew the lines they created safe Democratic districts and safe Republican districts. So they know if they win the primary they are a lock to win the general election.

"I ask every Californian to change this by voting Yes on Prop. 11."

Prop. 11 will take away legislators' power to draw their own district lines. Currently, communities such as La Jolla are broken up into as many as four districts. Under Proposition 11, an open and transparent process and respect for cities and communities of interest will give those neighborhoods a voice in Sacramento.

A bipartisan coalition of more than 2,100 groups, individuals, good government organizations, businesses, elected leaders, cities and community associations across California support Prop. 11.

Donna loves kids — and it's mutual

Councilmember Frye posed with school children and staff in front of a mural designed by artist Rafael Lopez, a parent of one of the students at Linda Vista's San Diego Cooperative Charter School. For more on Donna's October visit to the school, see Page 2.

Donna is a hit with students at SD Cooperative Charter School

Donna Frye's Oct. 24 visit to the San Diego Cooperative Charter School was a high point for the Councilmember and students alike, an informative and uplifting session enjoyed by all. Aided by their teachers, students crafted questions on a variety of topics, from water pollution and war to how government works and why elections are important. After hugs all around, the Councilmember promised to visit again soon.

Commission OKs mixed-use Palladium project in Kearny Mesa

The Planning Commission held a second hearing on the Palladium at Aero project on Oct. 23 and approved it by a 4-2 vote.

This proposed project consists of 412 residential rental units on the corner of Sandrock Road and Aero Drive, with 5,100 square feet of commercial space. The previous week, the Planning Commission asked the developers to go back and redesign the project. Their concerns were mostly about the "bulk and scale" of the project, similar to the concerns voiced by the residents and Serra Mesa Planning Group. The project is slated to be built in Kearny Mesa but it abuts a Serra Mesa neighborhood..

Commissioners asked that the developers place solar trees (similar to the ones in Kyocera's "solar grove" parking lot) on the roof of the parking structure. The developer had sought a deviation from requiring tree shading for cars and had wanted to use canopies for shading. They now must incorporate the solar trees into their design and have made changes to the east and west sides of the project.

City staff had requested that the applicant contribute funds toward the Streetscape and Street Yard Guidelines for Aero Drive. Instead, the applicant offered to develop the guidelines, which will become an appendix to the Kearny Mesa Community Plan.

On Oct. 22, the Serra Mesa Planning Group held a special meeting to discuss the project's revisions. However, there was no time to specifically discuss the proposed streetscape guidelines. The Serra Mesa Planning Group is requesting that the project be delayed until after Nov. 20, which is the next date they meet.

Only staff and the applicant have had input into the streetscape guidelines, and the Serra Mesa group wants to have some say in them as well.

Quarry Falls approved by Council

Large mixed-use project includes 4,780 homes plus commercial development

Mission Valley, already one of the most intensely developed communities of San Diego, is now slated for one of the largest housing projects ever proposed in the City.

The Quarry Falls mixed-use development, approved Oct. 21 by the City Council, will bring 4,780 houses, apartments and condominiums to Mission Valley, along with 900,000 of retail and commercial office space.

Replacing a mining operation on the north side of Friars Road from Mission Center Road to Interstate 805, the Sudberry Properties project is slated to be built in four phases over about 15 years. Its first phase, in the southwestern part of the 230-acre site, calls for 2,477 multifamily homes, including 306 units for seniors, and 80,000 square feet of retail and office space.

The massive project has drawn praise for its walkable “urban village” design, with energy-efficient construction, 30 acres of parks and open space, a charter school, a site for a fire station and shuttle buses to take residents to trolley stations and other nearby destinations.

But opponents insist the project will bring nightmarish traffic to roads that are often already clogged. At build-out, Quarry Falls is expected to generate an average of 52,000 vehicle-trips a day on Friar’s Road and surrounding streets. Mitigation plans call for Sudberry to spend tens of millions on road improvements, including a major overhaul of the problem-prone interchanges at Friars Road and state Route 163.

Councilmember Frye cast the only dissenting vote in the Council’s 7-1 approval, citing concerns about traffic as well as the amount of water the project will require.

“We are telling the public that we don’t have adequate water supply and that they have to reduce their consumption,” she said at the hearing.

Marsi Steirer, Water Department deputy director, said the water-supply emergency is short-term. Steirer said the City’s 20-year analysis indicates Quarry Falls would exceed its available water supply by 260,000 gallons a day, a deficit she said could be made up for with low-flow plumbing fixtures and a planned on-site plant to recycle waste water for landscaping and other non-potable uses.

The Council also voted 7-1 to initiate a community plan amendment process to examine whether the project should include a road connection to Phyllis Place and Interstate 805 in Serra Mesa. Frye again cast the dissenting vote, noting that Serra Mesa residents strongly oppose the road and that Quarry Falls could be built without it.

The plan review for the road is expected to take several months.

Frye saluted by Filipino-Asian economic development group

Mabuhay Alliance honored Councilmember Frye at its Fifth Annual Economic Development Conference on Oct. 18, the only time it has recognized a government leader with an award. Mabuhay is a San Diego-based nonprofit organization dedicated to enhancing the quality of life for Filipino-Americans and other Asian and Pacific Islander communities through economic advancement. The Alliance also concerns itself with the financial wellbeing of individuals, and was one of the first groups to raise awareness of the foreclosure crises and attempt to help people who were losing their homes. In presenting the award, Faith Bautista, Executive Director, cited Councilmember Frye’s efforts to get a proportionate share of the City’s contracts for minority- and women-owned businesses.

Councilmember Frye addressed members of the Mabuhay Alliance Oct. 18 after being recognized by the group.

Frye, DeMaio issue draft report on proposed City Council reforms

Four-month study recommends 15 major changes in policies, procedures

Councilmember Donna Frye and Councilmember-Elect Carl DeMaio held a news conference Oct. 27 at City Hall to release a “Draft” Report on City Council Governance — aimed at improving the openness, effectiveness and independence of the City Council in a Strong Mayor-Strong Council form of government.

The report is the result of an intensive four-month study on City Council policies and procedures — featuring interviews with experts in municipal management and input from the public through a series of Town Hall dialogues.

Billed as a “Draft” report, DeMaio and Frye want to provide for a public “review and comment” period before the report is finalized and presented to the incoming City Council for consideration.

“With the City Council membership changing, we have a unique opportunity to reposition the City Council as a constructive partner in solving the city’s financial problems,” said DeMaio.

“It is time to examine — in a truly bipartisan manner — the policies, structure, and operations of the City Council to make it a more effective and open legislative body,” commented Frye.

The draft report contains 15 major reforms to the way the City Council operates, including:

Evening and Community Meetings: The report proposes the City Council designate the first Monday meeting of each month as an evening meeting—and hold meetings in communities uniquely impacted by items pending before the Council.

Budget Process Reform: The report proposes the city move fully to “performance-based budgeting” and proposes to strengthen oversight of the city budget particularly in the area of mid-year budget changes by the Mayor.

Expanded Access to the Docket: To protect the right of the minority to docket items, the process would be streamlined, simplified and de-politicized—with staffing for docket management being transferred from the Council President’s Office to the Clerk’s Office.

Stronger Oversight: The report proposes to strengthen the City Council’s ability to gain timely access to government information and documents—and requires annual oversight meetings with the boards of the so-called independent agencies such as CCDC and SEDC.

Councilmember-elect DeMaio and Councilmember Frye unveiled a draft report on proposed Council reforms.

Frye proclaimed “Bayside Champion” by Bayside Community Center

Councilmember Frye was honored as a “Bayside Champion” for her longstanding support for Linda Vista’s Bayside Community Center, which provides essential services to individuals and families representing a variety of cultures in one of San Diego’s most diverse areas. Presenting the award at an Oct. 23 celebration was Bayside board member Kenneth So, joined by (from left) board members Mike Weber, Kevin Brown, Jim Sommerville and Elaine Elliott.

Since 2001, Councilmember Frye has supported Bayside Community Center with more than $1.2 million in public funding for services (including a much-needed housing counselor) and a major upgrade of the facility on Comstock Street in the heart of Linda Vista. She was among five inaugural Bayside Champions honored by Jorge Riquelme, executive director, for their contributions in the major overhaul and updating of the venerable center.

Long-awaited pedestrian tunnel under Friars Road close to reopening

“Ms. Frye, take down that wall!”

So quipped a Committee colleague to Councilmember Donna Frye, urging the long-delayed reopening of a pedestrian tunnel under Friars Road in Mission Valley.

At the Oct. 15 meeting of the Natural Resources and Culture Committee, chaired by Frye, City Planner Brian Schoenfisch explained how and why the “Ruffin Canyon Public Trail Tunnel” – also called the “Fenton Tunnel” -- is about to be reopened.

Built in 1968 as an undercrossing for trucks mining a quarry on the north side of Friars, the tunnel – 15 feet in height and width – was closed more than 20 years ago. Locked iron gates were installed to keep transients out.

Later the large Fenton Marketplace shopping center was built on the south, with Costco, Ikea and other stores. Also just south of the tunnel is the trolley line, the San Diego River and the Mission Valley Branch Library. Housing complexes with hundreds of apartments and condominiums are on the north side of Friars.

Those residents have had to walk far out of their way to cross Friars to reach the stores, library or trolley. Also cut off from easy north-south access are hikers using the popular Ruffin Canyon Trail. As advocates told the Committee, the tunnel is a key link in plans for a network of trails connecting the river to communities north and south of Mission Valley.

More than six years ago, the City began talks with the property owners on either side of the tunnel – H.G. Fenton Company on the north, Sudberry Properties on the south – exploring what it would take to get it reopened.

It’s been a long road, but Schoenfisch says we’re almost there.

Fenton is making the necessary improvements inside the tunnel, such as flooring, lighting and possibly murals or wall decorations. Sudberry has landscaped a grassy mini-park by the south gates and has agreed to pay for ongoing maintenance.

Attorneys for both companies are close to clearing the final hurdle, an agreement with the City Attorney’s Office on liability issues.

The Committee voted unanimously to bring the reopening plan before the full Council in coming weeks.

Frye, who also chairs the San Diego River Conservancy, said the tunnel will help connect neighboring communities to the river – and to each other.

Councilmember Toni Atkins agreed. “I can’t believe it’s taken this long,” she said. “I really look forward to the day when we can go from Normal Heights across Mission Valley and across the river (without having to use a car).”

Hikers at the San Diego River Days celebration encountered the locked gates of the tunnel in May

Housing Commission gets $7 million grant from HUD to combat lead paint hazards in homes

Great news for children and families:

The San Diego Housing Commission, on behalf of the City, is getting $7 million from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to help protect people from lead-paint hazards.

The HUD funds will enable the Housing Commission to continue a program whose goal is to eliminate lead hazards over the next three years in more than 500 residences built before 1978.

Grants of up to $10,000 per unit will be available to eliminate lead-paint hazards in households where children under age 6 reside.

“Keeping homes safe is a high priority for us and that’s what this program is about,” said Rick Gentry, San Diego Housing Commission President & CEO.

The Lead Safe San Diego Program is an ongoing collaborative effort between the city and several health-conscious organizations. It is administered by the Housing Commission, in conjunction with the Environmental Health Coalition, the City of San Diego Environmental Services, the County of San Diego Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program and other partners.

For more information about the Lead Safe San Diego Program, contact the Housing Commission at: 619-578-7521.

Local lifeguard wins national recognition for work with kids

Those who know Alison Terry can attest to the fact that her everyday activities make an extraordinary impact on those around her. Now, the rest of the country will, too.

The San Diego native, District Six resident and City of San Diego beach lifeguard is one of the winners of Nabisco 100 Calorie Packs' "Celebrating 100 Extraordinary Women" contest, which searched for women whose actions have made a significant impact on friends, family, community or society as a whole. Thousands of entries were received. Terry is one of seven women highlighted last month in Time Inc. magazines, including People, Entertainment Weekly, InStyle, Real Simple, Cooking Light and Health.

Terry, who lives in Clairemont, was selected for her work as an advocate to keep pools open and provide funding for free swimming lessons for youth. Terry has been a San Diego Beach Lifeguard I for 16 years. She was the first woman of African-American descent to compete on a US National Team Swim Team and to serve on the USA Swimming's Board of Directors. Still a competitor at age 34, she has held the San Diego CIF 100-yard freestyle record for 20 years.

Terry has taught water-safety and swim clinics in Africa. Last summer, she worked as a Sports and Cultural envoy for the U.S. State Department in Turkey. She has raised thousands of dollars to support local swim programs as the President of the San Diego Surf Lifesaving Association. She also helped develop local drowning-prevention programs benefiting thousands of youth, "Operation: Waterproof San Diego" and Bridge to the Beach with the San Diego Lifeguards.

Terry is proud to have such efforts nationally recognized.

"To be able to share my passion for swimming with others, to help build communities and offer kids the opportunity to learn to be swim who otherwise would not be able to — (that) makes me so happy," she said. "I was honored to be in the company of such inspirational women and hearing their stories inspires me to do even more"

Clairemont Branch Library turns 50 with lots of fun

On Oct, 18, Councilmember Frye helped the Clairemont community celebrate its Branch Library's 50th Anniversary. In addition to Donna saying a few congratulatory words and sharing some of her childhood memories about the library, festivities included face painting, a hula-hoop contest, musical performances, speeches by local long-time residents, librarians, and Friends of the Library.

Happy Birthday, Clairemont Branch Library!

A hula hoop contest was part of the celebration.

Council recognizes Clairemont's Keith Rhodes for community efforts

On October 21, 2008, Councilmember Frye had the opportunity to present a proclamation to Keith Rhodes for his outstanding work in the community.

Keith has been a passionate and active advocate for the improvement of his community for many years, and has always been thankful to the City of San Diego where his family found the opportunity to achieve a happy life in America's Finest City.

To name just a few of Keith's accomplishments, he serves on the Tecolote Recreation Council, is a long-time member of the Rancho Peñasquitos Planning Board, the North Bay Redevelopment Project Area Committee, and the Mobile Home Community Issues Committee.

He was an original participant in the formation of the San Dieguito River Valley Regional Open Space Park and sat on the Citizen's Advisory Board for several years.

Most recently at the "End of the Summer Family Day" at Western Hills Park in Bay Park, Keith held a celebration honoring Richard and Lisabet Wilson, the couple responsible for saving the 12-acre nature preserve from being developed in the 1950's, and who later helped to design the park. Keith led a ribbon-cutting ceremony and unveiled the two benches he donated to the park.

Councilmember Frye commends and thanks Keith Rhodes for his extensive civic and personal contributions to the many communities of the City of San Diego.

Keith Rhodes, center, was joined by supporters and Councilmember Frye after accepting his City Council proclamation.

Hanalei hotel conference center addition approved by Council

The City Council has given Mission Valley's Crowne Plaza Hanalei San Diego Hotel the go-ahead to build a 10,000-square-foot conference center addition, with some key environmental concessions to opponents who had appealed the project.

At an Oct. 6 Council hearing, operators of the 477-room hotel on Hotel Circle North agreed to Councilmember Frye's recommendation to revise their plans and move a proposed hiking and bicycle trail along the San Diego River farther south than initially proposed, to get it out of the river floodway. They also agreed to install a system to filter and treat at least 75 percent of their property's runoff into the river. With those stipulations agreed, the Council unanimously passed Frye's motion to approve the project.

Development Services Department officials had decided that the proposed project wouldn't require a detailed environmental-impact study because of its relatively small size and scope. They also said it did not have to comply with certain provisions of the area's Atlas Specific Plan, such as a setback buffer zone for the river channel, because the 50-year-old hotel was built before the plan was adopted. The Planning Commission agreed with those Development Services findings, and members of the San Diego Audubon Society, Sierra Club and other groups appealed that decision to the City Council.

At an earlier Council hearing on the matter Sept. 22, Councilmember Frye urged the Hanalei operators to try to work out some compromises with the opponents to address their concerns. The mitigation measures that were ultimately approved resulted from that collaboration.

Dick Weber, a member of the Hanalei owners group, said the conference center would take a year to build at a cost of about $2.5 million.

Crews complete emergency repairs to Kearny Mesa slope and canyon

Contractors for the City Engineering and Capital Improvements Department last month completed a $2.5 million emergency project to repair a Kearny Mesa canyon severely eroded by storm runoff. The steeply gouged, unstable slopes of a ravine west of the San Diego Chargers training facility were threatening structures above, including an auto insurance company at 4141 Ruffin Road. Crews stabilized and reconstructed the slope, installed a new 60-inch reinforced concrete pipe to channel runoff and landscaped the upper area of the slope. Construction began in May and was completed in mid-October.

Clairemont throws itself a birthday party

The community of Clairemont held its first official birthday party last month at the South Clairemont Recreation Center's gazebo.

Councilmember Frye attended the Oct. 19 event to present a proclamation to the Clairemont community in celebration of its first officially recognized birthday. For several years, the community had been undecided about exactly how old it was. Dave Konstantin of K-CO Construction and The Clairemont Community News researched the issue to determine and designate Clairemont's actual birthday.

This research led to discussions with city officials and community leaders, reviews of county records and articles in The Clairemont Community News seeking input from local residents. Years of efforts yielded no definitive answer.

It is said that the community was named after one of the subdivision's original owners, Marjorie "Claire" Tavares. Clairemont was San Diego's largest post-war subdivision and one of the country's first master-planned communities. Its vast canyon network, bay and ocean views, perfect weather, cultural diversity and central location all contribute to making Clairemont a wonderful place to live.

Now, the City Council, the Clairemont Town Council and the Clairemont Planning Group all agree that Clairemont's birthday is Oct. 16, 1950.
